The fairies were buzzing with excitement. It was the day before the Pixie Hollow Games—a series of sports events in which fairy talent groups competed against each other.

Rosetta was in charge of decorating the arena. Suddenly, she gasped. A new garden fairy, named Chloe, was headed straight for her flowers. And she was carrying a large rock! Rosetta stopped Chloe from knocking over the flowers, but mud splattered everywhere.

When Rosetta discovered that Chloe was training for the games, she took her to the Fairy Hall of Honor.

"Notice anything unusual?" Rosetta asked. "No garden-fairy team has ever come close to winning."

But Chloe only smiled. She was certain she was just the fairy to change that.

The next day, the talent groups gathered in the arena. The Pixie Hollow Games were about to begin! To Chloe's surprise, Rosetta had been chosen to be her partner. Rosetta didn't think they could win, but she wore a fancy dress so at least she would look fashionable.

Two storm fairies, Rumble and Glimmer, grinned at each other. They were going for their fifth straight win.

The first event was the Leapfrogging Race.
Rosetta thought the frogs were completely gross.

But Chloe and Rosetta made it to the next round! Their friends couldn't believe it. Even though they were in last place, it was further than any garden-fairy team had ever gotten before!

Day two began with Dragonfly Waterskiing. It was terrifying! But Chloe coached Rosetta on her form, and the two fairies zoomed across the finish line. The garden fairies were no longer in last place!

Next was the Twig Spheres Race. Chloe stood on top of their ball and ran backward to make it roll. Rosetta was inside, steering.

When the race was over, the garden fairies had come in second—right after Rumble and Glimmer! Rumble didn't like it that the garden fairies were catching up.

Mouse Polo was the next event. Rosetta grinned as she passed the ball to Chloe, then charged up the field.

Chloe passed the ball back to her. Rosetta took a deep breath, aimed, and scored! They had won another round!

The last event of the day was the Obstacle Course. The garden fairies hopped into flying teacups and took the lead. But the final obstacle was a slimy slug slide!

Rosetta refused to go down. As she and Chloe argued, everyone slid past them.

“Maybe we’re just not cut out for this after all,” said Chloe, defeated.

Rosetta felt terrible about making them lose the Obstacle Course. As she left the arena, she ran smack into Rumble.

"You just keep getting in my way, don't you?" he said angrily. "Why don't you just stick to being pretty? That's what you're good at!"

Rosetta was steamed. Somebody had to put Rumble in his place. She would prove him wrong!

The next day was the final event—the Pixie Cart Derby. When Rosetta arrived, the crowd gasped. She was dressed to compete! “I have a plan to win this whole thing,” she told Chloe. “Just trust me, okay?”

Each team had built a special cart to drive in the Derby. They all got off to a good start, but soon, only the storm fairies and the garden fairies were left in the race!

Mudslide Mountain loomed ahead. “This is our last chance to pass!” cried Chloe, looking at the shortcut.

“Now!” cried Rosetta. Since the fairies had been allowed to design their carts any way they liked, Rosetta had asked Tinker Bell to install a special lever on theirs. When she and Chloe pulled it, pinecones sprang out of the wheels to help them climb the mountain.

Once they reached the top, their cart turned into a giant sled! Mud sprayed everywhere as they slid down the mountain, but Rosetta didn't care. Her plan was working. They zoomed right around Rumble and Glimmer!

But Rumble refused to be beaten. He grabbed Glimmer's hand and shot a bolt of lightning at Rosetta and Chloe's cart.

KA-BOOM! The garden fairies' cart flipped over.

Rosetta and Chloe knew they couldn't win now, but they began to push their ruined cart. They were determined to finish the race, no matter what.

Rosetta and Chloe limped across the finish line.

"The winners," Queen Clarion announced, "are the garden fairies!"

"But I crossed the finish line first!" cried Rumble.

"Teammates must finish together," the Queen reminded him.

Rumble turned and saw Glimmer on the other side of the finish line. "Do you have any idea what you've done?" he cried.

"I helped the best team win," said Glimmer.

The crowd cheered as Queen Clarion smiled proudly at the two garden fairies. Rosetta and Chloe couldn't believe it.

They had won the Pixie Hollow Games!
